

A Review Analysis of the Crumble App

What customers are telling us, and what we can do about it

PREPARED BY

Noor UI Ain Zahid

Business Data Analyst

REPORT METADATA

Data Source	Google Play Store
Analysis Date	June 19, 2026
Coverage Period	June 12, 2023 - June 11, 2026
Total reviews	277 Reviews

Contents

Introduction..... 3

A Quick Snapshot 3

How Customers Are Rating the App..... 3

 More people are leaving reviews, but ratings are slipping 4

What Customers Are Complaining About 4

 1. Delivery and logistics is the single biggest problem 5

 2. The app itself has bugs and runs slowly 6

 3. Payments do not always go through smoothly 6

 4. Promo codes and discounts often do not work 6

 5. Smaller but still meaningful problems 6

What Customers Love About Crumble 7

Recommended Actions 7

 Priority 1: Fix delivery and logistics 7

 Priority 2: Make the app more stable 8

 Priority 3: Make payments reliable 8

 Priority 4: Start replying to reviews 8

 Priority 5: Protect what is already working 8

Conclusion 8

Introduction

This report looks at what customers are saying about the Crumble app on the Google Play Store. The goal is simple: to understand the problems customers are facing, so the business can fix them and give customers a better experience.

I collected 277 reviews written over almost three years, from June 2023 to June 2026. Each review was read and grouped by topic, so we could see clearly which problems come up the most, and what customers like most about Crumble.

A Quick Snapshot

Before going into details, here are the most important numbers from the reviews.

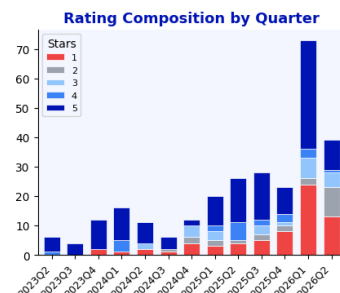

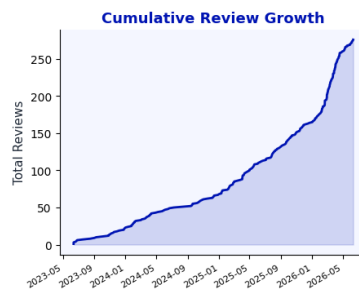

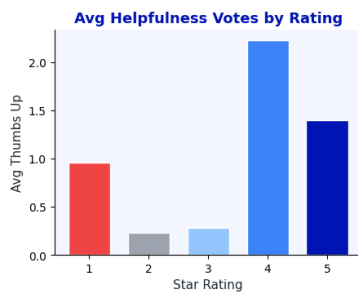

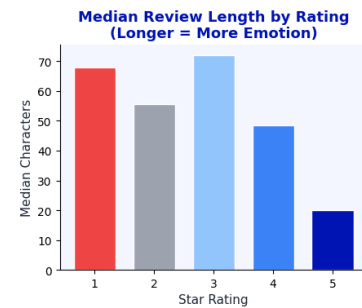

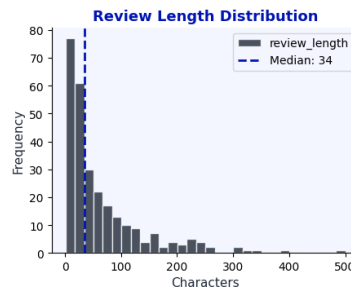

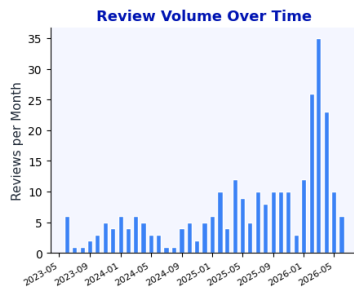

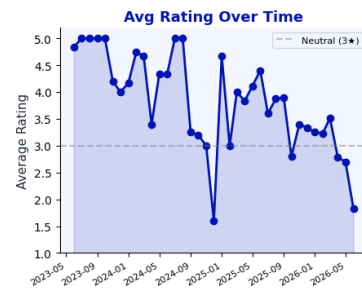

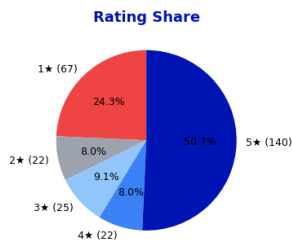

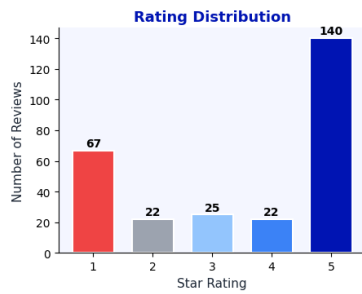

3.53 / 5 Average Rating	58.7% Positive Reviews	32.2% Negative Reviews	9.1% Neutral Reviews
277 Total Reviews	34 characters Average Review Length	0% Business Replies	3 Years Time Period Covered

Two things stand out right away. First, customers write very short reviews, on average only 34 characters, which is about one short sentence. This means most customers are not explaining their issues in detail, so the patterns in this report matter even more, since they represent the small number of words customers chose to leave behind.

Second, not a single review has received a reply from the business. Out of 277 reviews, including the 67 one-star reviews, none were responded to. Replying to customers, especially unhappy ones, is one of the simplest ways to show customers that the business is listening.

How Customers Are Rating the App

The chart below brings together several views of the ratings data, including the overall spread of star ratings, how the average rating has changed over time, and how many reviews are coming in each month.

Overview of ratings, review volume, and review patterns over time

More people are leaving reviews, but ratings are slipping

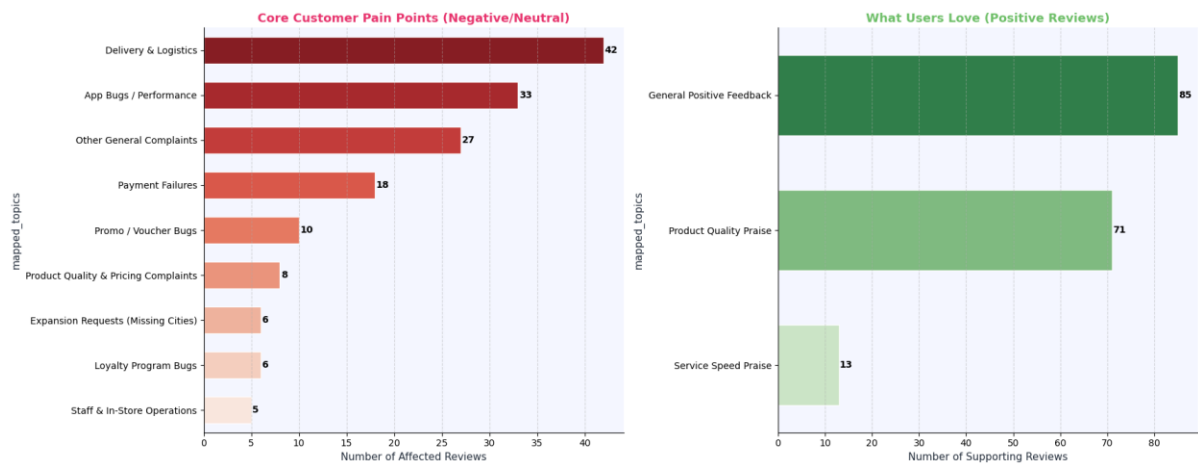

The number of reviews being left each month has grown a lot, especially from late 2025 into 2026, which likely means more people are using the Crumble app. This is good news for the business.

However, the average rating per month has been falling during this same busy period. In the earlier years, monthly average ratings were often close to 5 stars. In the most recent months shown in the data, the average rating has dropped sharply, falling below 2 stars in some months. This is an important warning sign. As more customers try the app, a growing number of them are leaving disappointed, and the business has a closing window to fix the root causes before this becomes the normal experience for new customers.

What Customers Are Complaining About

Every negative and neutral review, 114 in total, was read and grouped into a topic based on what the customer actually described. Some reviews mentioned more than one problem, which is why the topic counts below add up to more than 114. Here is what we found, ranked from the biggest problem to the smallest.

Left side: the problems customers complain about most. Right side: what customers praise most.

Topic	Reviews	Share	Priority
Delivery and Logistics	42	27%	Highest
App Bugs and Performance	33	21%	High
Other General Complaints	27	17%	Medium
Payment Failures	18	12%	Medium
Promo and Voucher Issues	10	7%	Medium
Product Quality and Pricing	8	5%	Low
Cities Not Yet Covered	6	4%	Low
Loyalty Program Issues	6	4%	Low
Staff and In-Store Service	5	3%	Low

1. Delivery and logistics is the single biggest problem

More than one in four complaints, 27 percent, are about delivery. Customers describe long waiting times, food arriving cold, the wrong order being delivered, and their exact location or address not being found in the app. This is the clearest and most urgent issue for the business to fix, since it directly affects whether a customer enjoys the order they paid for.

“Waiting 40 minutes only to receive cold or incorrect food ruins the experience, especially when it is clear the staff lacks management and skips the proper queue.”

“I am unable to place an order because the location DHA I Sector B is not showing, while other sectors in DHA are available. Please fix this issue as soon as possible.”

2. The app itself has bugs and runs slowly

21 percent of complaints are about the app not working properly. Customers mention the app crashing, freezing, being slow to load, and trouble receiving the OTP code needed to log in or place an order. These are technical issues that stop a customer from even reaching the point of placing an order.

“Worst app ever, did not open even once.”

“I could not get the OTP code on my phone, and the OTP sent by email arrived after the time had already run out. It took me 7 to 8 tries to get a working OTP.”

3. Payments do not always go through smoothly

12 percent of complaints are about payment problems, including cards not being accepted, money being deducted without the order going through, and customers being forced to pay online through the app even when ordering in person at a branch.

“They force you to install the app and make online payments while you are just standing outside their branch, and their app is so rubbish it takes ages to confirm the order and payment.”

4. Promo codes and discounts often do not work

7 percent of complaints are about promo codes, vouchers, and discounts not applying correctly at checkout. This is a smaller issue, but it directly affects how much a customer pays, so it is worth fixing.

5. Smaller but still meaningful problems

A number of customers had concerns about the taste or quality of certain products, the pricing being too high, certain cities or areas not yet being covered by delivery, points in the loyalty program not working as expected, and rude or poor treatment from staff in physical branches. None of these are the biggest issues on their own, but together they show up across many different parts of the customer experience.

“Extremely sweet, horrendous taste. I could feel the sweetness in my ears.”

“I tried the cold drink for the first time. Seventy percent ice cubes and thirty percent drink. I paid five hundred fifty rupees for ice.”

“I was made to wait outside the shop and told to place my order through the app instead.”

What Customers Love About Crumble

It is just as important to understand what is working well, so the business protects and builds on its strengths. Among the 162 positive reviews, the praise falls into three clear groups, and some reviews touch on more than one.

General positive feedback, 85 reviews, half of all praise. Many customers simply leave short, happy comments such as “good”, “amazing”, or “love it”, showing strong overall satisfaction even without going into detail.

Product quality, 71 reviews, 42 percent of praise. Customers regularly praise the taste, freshness, and quality of the food and drinks. This is the heart of the Crumble brand and clearly the biggest reason customers come back.

Service speed, 13 reviews, 8 percent of praise. A smaller but meaningful group of customers praise how fast, smooth, and easy their ordering experience was.

This tells us something important. The product itself, the taste and quality customers receive, is well loved. The problems customers face are mostly about the experience of getting that product to them, through delivery, the app, and payments, rather than the product itself.

Recommended Actions

Based on these findings, here is what we suggest the business focus on, in order of priority.

Priority 1: Fix delivery and logistics

- Review how delivery locations and addresses are matched in the app, so customers in covered areas are not told their address is unavailable.
- Set clear delivery time targets and track how often riders meet them, especially in areas with frequent late delivery complaints.
- Add simple checks before an order leaves the branch to reduce wrong items and food arriving cold.

Priority 2: Make the app more stable

- Investigate and fix the OTP delivery delay, since this stops customers from logging in or ordering at all.
- Test the app on a range of phones and network speeds to catch the freezing and loading problems customers describe.
- Add a way for customers to retry a failed action, such as login or payment, without restarting the whole process.

Priority 3: Make payments reliable

- Review the payment gateway for failed or stuck transactions, especially cases where money is deducted but the order does not go through.
- Reconsider forcing in-branch walk-in customers to use the app for payment, since this is creating frustration rather than convenience.

Priority 4: Start replying to reviews

- Begin replying to negative reviews first, since none have been answered so far. A simple, caring reply shows customers the business is listening.
- Use replies to invite frustrated customers to share more details directly with support, so issues can be resolved one-to-one.

Priority 5: Protect what is already working

- Keep investing in product taste and freshness, since this is the single strongest reason customers stay loyal to Crumble.
- Use real customer praise, such as comments about taste and quality, in marketing, since this is what customers care about most.

Conclusion

Crumble has a loyal customer base that genuinely loves the taste and quality of its products. This is a strong foundation. At the same time, the business is growing quickly, and the experience around getting the product to the customer, through delivery, the app, and payments, is not keeping up with that growth.

The clearest opportunity for the business is to close the gap between a product customers already love and an experience that matches it. Fixing delivery delays, app stability, and payment reliability will likely have the biggest and fastest impact on customer satisfaction going forward.